Marchers of the Ukrainian youth organizations during the civic organizations were conducted in the spring of 1932-33. At least one-third of the participants in the Marches were women. The Civic organizations were formed in response to the Malanka, a traditional festival that celebrates the end of winter and the beginning of spring. The festival was accompanied by dances and other forms of entertainment.

The active committee was composed of Ivan Hosh, tenor, with Mrs. P. Pucilo and J. Evanchuk as compilers. Among other people present were Very Rev. A. Sharan, president of the UCCA, and Volodymyr Bilas, the editor of Svoboda. The active committee consisted of a number of people, including Kozlov, a member of the civic organizations.

Representing the Mayor of Philadelphia, Mayor Frank Rizzo, and representing the Major of the Ukrainian community, Mayor H. W. Sisak, were among the prominent guests.

The concert program featured several well-known performers, including S. Todoruk, a tenor, and J. Evanchuk, a soprano. The concerts were held in the various towns of the state, and the audience was very enthusiastic.

At the conclusion of the concert, the audience gave a standing ovation to the performers, and the Civic organizations received a high praise from the audience.

In conclusion, the Civic organizations were successful in promoting the Ukrainian culture and traditions in the state. The Civic organizations were able to reach a wide audience, and the performances were very well received. The Civic organizations are an important part of the Ukrainian community in the state, and they continue to promote the Ukrainian culture and traditions.
IGNORANCE OR MALICE?
It is difficult, at times, to assess the motive behind an act of aggression. Is it the result of a personal quarrel or of a group of persons or an entire society that has been drawn to a certain position, or is it the result of a larger force, such as a national or international movement? In either case, the motives behind the act must be understood in order to evaluate its impact.

An editorial article entitled "The Shevchenko Affair" appeared in the Shevchenko Review, a publication founded by the Ukrainian National Association in Toronto. The article raised the question of why Canadian immigration authorities had deported a man from Canada to the Ukraine.

The article stated that "The Shevchenko Affair" was a case of discrimination against Ukrainian immigrants who had been denied the right to continue their education in Canada. The article argued that the deportation was not justified because the man had not engaged in any illegal activities and that he had been convicted of a minor offense.

The article concluded by calling for the immediate cessation of the construction of the Trans-Canada Highway because it would further exacerbate the grievances of Ukrainian immigrants. The article further stated that the construction of the highway would be a violation of the rights of Ukrainian immigrants and that it would result in the loss of their homeland.

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. — A diverse group of young people gathered in the Ukrainian American Community Center last week to mark the centenary of the Ukrainian Constitution of November 28, 1918.

The event, organized by the Ukrainian Historical Society of America, was attended by a mix of Ukrainians and non-Ukrainians. Among those present were members of the community who had worked on the project, as well as some who had not.

At the center of the event was a presentation by historian Oleh Zwadiuk. He spoke about the history of the Ukrainian Constitution and its significance in the country's development.

Following Zwadiuk's presentation, attendees had a chance to ask questions and discuss the topic further. The event concluded with a moment of silence in memory of those who had lost their lives in the struggle for Ukrainian independence.

The Ukrainian Historical Society of America plans to continue its work on the centenary of the Constitution with future events and educational initiatives.
