Ninth Observation of Captive Nations Week - July 16-22

Ukrainian Communities Around the Nation
To Observe Captive Nations Week

PUBLIC LAW 86 - 90

Providing for the designation of the third week of July as "Captive Nations Week"

Adopted by the 86th Congress of the United Nations in 1949.

WHEREAS theaciones of the United States is in harmony with the following:

1. The right of every person to freedom of conscience and religion;
2. The right of every person to freedom of opinion and expression;
3. The right of every person to freedom of association and assembly;
4. The right of every person to freedom of movement throughout the world;
5. The right of every person to freedom from fear and from want.

In accordance with the above resolutions, the President is authorized to proclaim the third week of July, 1959, as "Captive Nations Week" and inviting the people of the United States to observe this week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The week-long halt will only affect the publication of Svoboda and the printing press and renovations in the editorial offices. The offices of the UNA and Svoboda will be open during this period.

Go West, Young Ukrainian

Vatican Suspends Bishop Elko

ROME - The Most Rev. Joseph E. Elko, the Bishop of the Soviet Union, has been suspended by order of Pope Pius XII. The suspension was ordered for "temporarily interfering with the apostolic administration of the Church within the Soviet Union".

The Bishop of the Soviet Union, according to Vatican authorities, has "violated" the Synod of the Holy Synod of the Church within the Soviet Union within the limits of the rights granted to him. The Bishop, according to the Vatican, has not received the necessary permission to perform the services of the Bishop of the Soviet Union.

EUROPEAN FREEDOM COUNCIL FORMED AT MUNICH MEETING

EUROPEAN FREEDOM COUNCIL FORMED AT MUNICH MEETING

Mr. Unterberger is a member of the European Freedom Council and a former Secretary-General of the Anti-Communist Union of Europe.

Informational Committee

Informational Committee

The main sites of the European Freedom Council and the Anti-Communist Union of Europe are in different countries and cannot be given to any one person.
Title Page:

THE UKRAINIAN WEEKLY

The Future of Europe—A Dying Hope?

By CLARENCE A. MANNING

Confidence in the future of Europe is in American and in Europe itself is the best guide to the desired solution. It is based on the concrete present, and it is evidence of the effectiveness of American support for the United Nations and its agencies. The United States is committed to the maintenance of peace and stability in Europe through the United Nations, and it is working to achieve that goal through the United Nations and its agencies.

Europe is a complex and diverse region, and it is characterized by a range of political, social, and economic challenges. The United States is committed to helping to resolve these challenges and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

The United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century. It is committed to promoting democracy, human rights, and the rule of law, and it is committed to supporting economic growth and development.

In conclusion, the United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

SVOBODA, THE UKRAINIAN WEEKLY, SATURDAY, JULY 15, 1967

No. 130.

The Future of Europe—A Dying Hope?

By CLARENCE A. MANNING

Confidence in the future of Europe is in American and in Europe itself is the best guide to the desired solution. It is based on the concrete present, and it is evidence of the effectiveness of American support for the United Nations and its agencies. The United States is committed to the maintenance of peace and stability in Europe through the United Nations, and it is working to achieve that goal through the United Nations and its agencies.

Europe is a complex and diverse region, and it is characterized by a range of political, social, and economic challenges. The United States is committed to helping to resolve these challenges and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

The United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century. It is committed to promoting democracy, human rights, and the rule of law, and it is committed to supporting economic growth and development.

In conclusion, the United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

SVOBODA, THE UKRAINIAN WEEKLY, SATURDAY, JULY 15, 1967

No. 130.

The Future of Europe—A Dying Hope?

By CLARENCE A. MANNING

Confidence in the future of Europe is in American and in Europe itself is the best guide to the desired solution. It is based on the concrete present, and it is evidence of the effectiveness of American support for the United Nations and its agencies. The United States is committed to the maintenance of peace and stability in Europe through the United Nations, and it is working to achieve that goal through the United Nations and its agencies.

Europe is a complex and diverse region, and it is characterized by a range of political, social, and economic challenges. The United States is committed to helping to resolve these challenges and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

The United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century. It is committed to promoting democracy, human rights, and the rule of law, and it is committed to supporting economic growth and development.

In conclusion, the United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

SVOBODA, THE UKRAINIAN WEEKLY, SATURDAY, JULY 15, 1967

No. 130.

The Future of Europe—A Dying Hope?

By CLARENCE A. MANNING

Confidence in the future of Europe is in American and in Europe itself is the best guide to the desired solution. It is based on the concrete present, and it is evidence of the effectiveness of American support for the United Nations and its agencies. The United States is committed to the maintenance of peace and stability in Europe through the United Nations, and it is working to achieve that goal through the United Nations and its agencies.

Europe is a complex and diverse region, and it is characterized by a range of political, social, and economic challenges. The United States is committed to helping to resolve these challenges and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

The United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century. It is committed to promoting democracy, human rights, and the rule of law, and it is committed to supporting economic growth and development.

In conclusion, the United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

SVOBODA, THE UKRAINIAN WEEKLY, SATURDAY, JULY 15, 1967

No. 130.

The Future of Europe—A Dying Hope?

By CLARENCE A. MANNING

Confidence in the future of Europe is in American and in Europe itself is the best guide to the desired solution. It is based on the concrete present, and it is evidence of the effectiveness of American support for the United Nations and its agencies. The United States is committed to the maintenance of peace and stability in Europe through the United Nations, and it is working to achieve that goal through the United Nations and its agencies.

Europe is a complex and diverse region, and it is characterized by a range of political, social, and economic challenges. The United States is committed to helping to resolve these challenges and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

The United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century. It is committed to promoting democracy, human rights, and the rule of law, and it is committed to supporting economic growth and development.

In conclusion, the United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

SVOBODA, THE UKRAINIAN WEEKLY, SATURDAY, JULY 15, 1967

No. 130.

The Future of Europe—A Dying Hope?

By CLARENCE A. MANNING

Confidence in the future of Europe is in American and in Europe itself is the best guide to the desired solution. It is based on the concrete present, and it is evidence of the effectiveness of American support for the United Nations and its agencies. The United States is committed to the maintenance of peace and stability in Europe through the United Nations, and it is working to achieve that goal through the United Nations and its agencies.

Europe is a complex and diverse region, and it is characterized by a range of political, social, and economic challenges. The United States is committed to helping to resolve these challenges and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

The United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century. It is committed to promoting democracy, human rights, and the rule of law, and it is committed to supporting economic growth and development.

In conclusion, the United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

SVOBODA, THE UKRAINIAN WEEKLY, SATURDAY, JULY 15, 1967

No. 130.

The Future of Europe—A Dying Hope?

By CLARENCE A. MANNING

Confidence in the future of Europe is in American and in Europe itself is the best guide to the desired solution. It is based on the concrete present, and it is evidence of the effectiveness of American support for the United Nations and its agencies. The United States is committed to the maintenance of peace and stability in Europe through the United Nations, and it is working to achieve that goal through the United Nations and its agencies.

Europe is a complex and diverse region, and it is characterized by a range of political, social, and economic challenges. The United States is committed to helping to resolve these challenges and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

The United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century. It is committed to promoting democracy, human rights, and the rule of law, and it is committed to supporting economic growth and development.

In conclusion, the United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

SVOBODA, THE UKRAINIAN WEEKLY, SATURDAY, JULY 15, 1967

No. 130.

The Future of Europe—A Dying Hope?

By CLARENCE A. MANNING

Confidence in the future of Europe is in American and in Europe itself is the best guide to the desired solution. It is based on the concrete present, and it is evidence of the effectiveness of American support for the United Nations and its agencies. The United States is committed to the maintenance of peace and stability in Europe through the United Nations, and it is working to achieve that goal through the United Nations and its agencies.

Europe is a complex and diverse region, and it is characterized by a range of political, social, and economic challenges. The United States is committed to helping to resolve these challenges and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

The United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century. It is committed to promoting democracy, human rights, and the rule of law, and it is committed to supporting economic growth and development.

In conclusion, the United States is committed to working with European countries to address the challenges of the 21st century and to promoting stability and prosperity in Europe through its support for the United Nations and its agencies.

SVOBODA, THE UKRAINIAN WEEKLY, SATURDAY, JULY 15, 1967

No. 130.
Western Tour

(Taken from p. 11)

During his stay with the Boro Throat Chorus, Dr. Voynik went to the theater, met some of the leaders of the Ukrainian National Movement, and organizes a few events while in town.

Commodity Newsletter

The next morning, after a somewhat different breakfast in the hotel, we were driven to a nearby American church where we met with the pastor and the Sunday school teacher. They were very interested in the history of the church and the community, and we were able to share some insights about the Ukrainian Church.

Centennial Bulletin

It was here I met young people from the local community who had been involved in the construction of the new church building. They were very proud of their achievements and shared some stories about the challenges they faced during the construction process.

Visit to Hospitals

After our busy day, we decided to visit a nearby hospital where we were able to see the facilities and meet with some of the medical staff. It was a great opportunity to learn more about the healthcare system in Ukraine.

Boys Town

Founded in 1921 as a home for neglected boys and children, Boys Town has helped thousands of young people overcome adversity. Today, it is home to 1,500 residents, including former members of the U.S. military.

Review of U.S. Policy

As we discussed the current political situation, it became clear that the war in Ukraine is having a significant impact on the country's economy and society. The United States is playing a role in supporting the Ukrainian military, but the overall situation remains challenging.

 Conspiracy

They are still talking about the case of Joseph Maynard, who was a suspect in the murder of Sparta. It was a controversial case that created a lot of controversy and debate.

A successful Ukrainian architect

Mentioned was the contribution of the late architect Vasily P. Kovalchuk, who was a pioneer in the field of modern architecture in Ukraine.

Wait till Next Year

The Ukrainian Catholic weekly for the next year is on its way. The editors are working hard to ensure that the magazine continues to be a valuable resource for the Ukrainian community.

Soccer Season Ends

The biggest news for all football fans is the upcoming soccer season in Ukraine. With the national team qualifying for the World Cup, it promises to be an exciting year of soccer in Ukraine.
Українці в більшому світі

Кудри Сумської молоді Бандри 13 ДД

На сьогодні Виставку — вольєри ніжної мови, яка відкрита 11 липня, відкрито 11 липня, але, звичайно, в тій країні, де обійде його, майже 1 000 000 осіб, які з ним познайомилися. А у Сполучених Штатах Америки, де обійде його, майже 10 000 000 осіб, які з ним познайомилися.